

31/03/2011

Head Chef goes to School

Head Chef Andrew Troughton returned to school on 11th March 2011, but this time it was to help support the “Let’s Get Cooking” Classes. The programme, which is National Lottery Funded, aims to set up a network of 5,000 cooking clubs across the country to teach cooking skills to more than one million children and their families.

The Evesham Journal showcased his trip to Simon de Montfort Middle School, where youngsters from Years 7 and 8 were given a cookery masterclass and were shown how to make a mushroom risotto served with fried wild salmon.

Andy helps pupils to get cooking

CULINARY whizzkids at Simon de Montfort Middle School were given a cookery masterclass from visiting chef Andy Troughton.

Andy, the head chef at Dormy House Hotel near Broadway, was at the Evesham school to help support its Let’s Get Cooking classes, during which he shared some of his tricks of the trade with youngsters from Years 7 and 8.

Using fresh ingredients he showed them how to make a mushroom risotto served with fried wild salmon which, of course, the pupils got to taste at the end.

Let’s Get Cooking is a £20m Lottery-funded programme that aims to set up a network of 5,000 cooking clubs across the country to teach cooking skills to more than one million children and their families.

● Simon de Montfort Middle School pupils Ana Costa-Martins and Jess Clemson, both 12, with Dormy House head chef Andy Troughton during the Let’s Get Cooking class. 11mar11046.

ENDS

FURTHER INFORMATION

Issued by: Orazio Pollaci, Sales and Marketing Manager, Dormy House Hotel, Willersey Hill, Broadway, Worcestershire, WR12 7LF.
Tel: 01386 852711
oraziop@dormyhouse.co.uk
www.dormyhouse.co.uk